The Stranger Final Reflection. One of the main themes in Albert Camus's The Stranger is that the universe is irrational and life has no meaning. Camus's writing strongly supports the idea that a person's life is meaningless and has no structure or real order. Over the course of the novel, the main character Meursault exhibits odd behavior in comparison to that of the other "normal" characters Camus introduces.

Reflection: The Stranger in the Mirror is a Fantasy story about a young Heiress named Nerissa. The prequel says it is optional to read, but I recommend reading it before anyway. It will help explain some things. The story centers around the event of a Masquerade Ball - the one where Nerissa will finally be anonymous for once in her life.

The Stranger: Reflection - Term Paper

Existentialism is rightly seen in Albert Camus' novel The Stranger. Meursault, the principal character himself narrates the whole of the story. It started with his mother's death and burial towards meeting the other characters, Marie, Raymond and others.

The title character of The Stranger is Meursault, a Frenchman who lives in Algiers (a pied-noir). The novel is famous for its first lines: "Mother died today. Or maybe it was yesterday, I don't know." They capture Meursault's anomie briefly and brilliantly. After this introduction, the reader follows Meursault through the novel's first-person narration to Marengo, where he sits vigil at the place of his mother's death.
